

Virtual Recreation Safety

FVSRA has integrated specific safety measures into all virtual programming to keep participants safe and programs running smoothly. We are committed to safety and will continually evaluate additional precautions and best practices.

Supervision:

We follow the rule of three.

Each program will have at least two staff facilitating at all times. Additionally, participants are required to have someone to provide supervision during their programming time.

Program Security:

We keep links private.

All of our virtual programs have a specific code that is required in order to access our Zoom rooms. These codes are not published publically and are only given to individuals who have registered through FVSRA.

We configured Zoom settings for optimal security.

We have enabled the "Waiting Room" feature which allows our staff to screen each user before they are allowed to access the program. Staff will only admit those who have registered into the program room.

Specific Zoom settings have been disabled for participants and/or are only permitted for use by our team members. Only our staff can privately message a user, share a file or their computer screen with the group or have the option to record the program.

We can remove a participant immediately if needed.

Our second staff is responsible for monitoring participant behaviors, trouble shooting technology, and assisting with the overall management of the group. We have enabled the feature to be able to immediately remove a participant from a program if needed.
